LAST week the scenic mountain town of Park City, Utah, welcomed some of Hollywood's "beautiful people". Demi Moore and Kate Bosworth were at the Sundance Film Festival with a host of other A-listers promoting new movies.

Moore arrived in true celebrity style, by private jet (right).

Park City, situated 30 miles east of Salt Lake City is the hub for this annual event. Dating from the 1800s, it boasts three ski resorts: Park City Mountain Resort, Deer Valley and The Canyons, which is regarded as the best in North America.

In Park City's Main Street you can find a multitude of bars and award-winning restaurants serving everything from Mexican to European gourmet cuisine.

Pavements are also lined with colourful stores selling designer clothing, art and crafts, hardware and hand-crafted furniture.

A must-visit is Burns Cowboy Shop, a traditional Western store since 1876.

As well as the film festival, founded in the early Eighties by actor Robert Redford, Park City hosts many annual events and cultural activities including performing arts, sport and music. The city's free public transport is the best way to get around.
